GENERAL INFORMATION

INTRODUCTION

The tenth meeting of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) will be held in Santiago, from 19–21 November 2019.

This document is intended to provide delegates with useful information to facilitate their work at the meeting.

The meeting coordinators will be available to answer any questions concerning logistical or organizational matters that you may have, before or during the event.

1. General information on Chile

Geographical location

Chile is located in the extreme south-west of South America, between the Pacific Ocean and the Andes mountains. The country, whose long, thin territory is divided into 16 administrative regions, has a total population of approximately 18 million.

The capital

Santiago is the capital of the Republic of Chile and, including its wider metropolitan region, is home to seven million inhabitants. It has a Mediterranean climate and well-defined seasons, with rainy winters (from May to September) with minimum temperatures as low as 0° C, and dry summers (from November to March) with highs of around 30° C. Relative humidity is low and evenings are cool.

It is suggested that visitors drink bottled water, since tap water, although safe to drink, may not agree with those not accustomed to it.

As in all big cities, for safety reasons it is advisable to avoid wearing expensive jewellery and to be careful with handbags and briefcases.
